What is JOSHUA?

We are a nonprofit, interfaith social justice organization located in Brown County.

JOSHUA is committed to doing more than just offering a helping hand. Rather than simply providing assistance, we seek to form a community of neighbors who can together make our community a place where everyone has a chance to succeed.

To create change, JOSHUA utilizes:

Education

Helping people better understand how their faith impacts issues affecting their community;

Empowerment

Ordinary people learning to effectively participate in issues of justice; Advocacy
Speaking with a common voice for our values; and Action

Moving beyond the walls of our churches to make our presence felt and to transform our community. JOSHUA is a 501(c)3 non-profit organization. JOSHUA's mission is to seek common ground and unite around issues that bring people together. Since its formation in 2004, JOSHUA has been working to make our community a place where everyone has a chance to succeed: where people of many income levels can own homes in new housing developments; where all our public schools reflect the rich diversity of our population; where treatment instead of prison is available for nonviolent offenders with drug or alcohol addictions; where stewardship of the environment is valued; and where immigrants and diverse cultures are welcome.
